

Jan Carlos Carranza

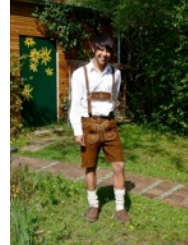

Jan Carlos father and mother separated when he was at a young age and he went to live with his father, who was later killed in a car accident. He therefore went on to live with his aunt, who was unable to care for him, due to extreme poverty.

Jan Carlos has always been an exceptional student and always behaves well. He is a natural leader and cares for the other boys. He is responsible and very reliable with all of his duties.

Because of his outstanding performance and character he moved to our transition house in San Pedro Sula in order to study business administration at a private high school.

In August 2008 he was given the opportunity to go and study in Germany for 1 year, staying with friends and supporters of Accion Humana. This was an exceptional experience for this young man who has learned German well and came back loaded with many new impressions.

He is back in San Pedro Sula since August 2009 and is finishing his high school degree.

Jan Carlos is also a fanatic and outstanding soccer player and does use every free minute to exercise. He is currently also attending intensive English classes with the aim to pass his test of English for foreign language students, which will make him trilingual and eligible for a brilliant international future. He is seriously considering returning to Germany to study or work after he finished his school education in Honduras.
